

Komjathy Book Endorsements

Given that entities like the AI-generated Laing Z. Matthews are beginning to publish books with fabricated and fraudulent endorsements unethically and illegally using my name, I have compiled this list for individuals who wish to know which books I have actually endorsed. Asterisks (*) indicate editorial changes published without the required agreement for my final approval. That is, they represent quasi-endorsements. In addition, given my increasing skepticism concerning and renunciation of mainstream publishing, based as it is in conformist mentalities, political agendas, and corporate motives, I have generally ceased endorsing any and all work outside of my own.¹

A World of Their Own: Daoist Monks and Their Community in Contemporary China by Adeline Herrou (Three Pines Press, 2013)*

China's Green Religion: Daoism and the Quest for a Sustainable Future by James Miller (Columbia University Press, 2017)

Catalyzing the Field: Second-Person Approaches to Contemplative Learning and Inquiry, edited by Olen Gunnlaugson, Charles Scott, Heesoon Bai, and Edward Sarath (State University of New York Press, 2019)

The Arts of Daoism by Johan Hausen (Purple Cloud Press, 2021)

Seeking Immortals: A Modern Daoist Travelogue by Brock Silvers (Sacred Mountain Press, 2024)*

The Dragon Gate's Core Methods by Johan Hausen (Purple Cloud Press, 2025)

¹ Clear examples include the “Chinese Philosophy and Culture series” through the State University of New York Press, the so-called “New Daoist Studies series” (University of Hawaii Press), as well as any and all publications associated with the Zhuāngzǐ Philosophy Industry (ZZPI) (e.g., Moeller and Ziporyn at al.).
